Reckless homicide charge filed in June crash

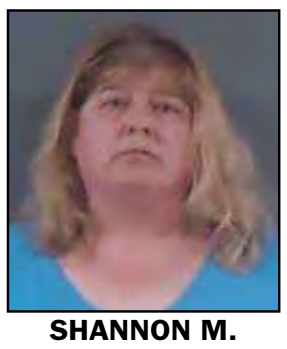
By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

A Washington County woman has been arrested on reckless homicide charges in connection with a two-car, head-on collision that killed a Madison man last June on U.S. 421 in Ripley County.

Indiana State Police Troopers Thursday arrested Shannon M. Hubbard, 50, of Pekin after an investigation into the fatal crash that occurred at 3:30 p.m. Friday, June 14, just south of CR 1050 South in Ripley County near the Jefferson County line.

Hubbard was driving a Kia Soul that collided head-on with a Mitsubishi Mirage driven by Henry M. Finney, 21, of Madison. As a result of the collision, Finney died of his injuries at King's Daughters' Hospital in Madison. Hubbard was also injured in the collision but survived. She was taken to King's Daughters' Hospital and then flown to University of Cincinnati Hospital by the lifeline helicopter in "serious but stable" condition.

The investigation, by Trooper Andrew Garrett of the Indiana State Police-Versailles Crash Reconstruction Team, determined that Hubbard had been traveling at a speed above the posted speed limit while southbound on U.S. 421. She had pulled out to pass another vehicle that was southbound on U.S. 421 when her Kia collided head-on with Finney's Mitsubishi northbound.



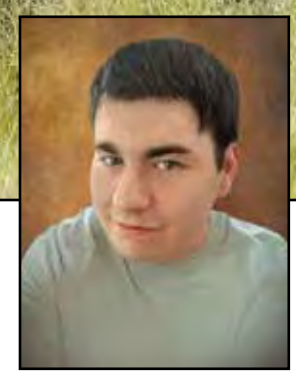
SHANNON M. HUBBARD

Further evidence indicated that Hubbard was traveling about 79 mph a few seconds before the collision. Toxicology tests also determined that Hubbard had THC in her system when the crash occurred, while Finney's toxicology results did not show any drugs or alcohol in his system at the time of the crash.

THC, short for tetrahydrocannabinol, is the principal psychoactive component in marijuana. Drivers in Indiana who have THC in their system are considered to be impaired.

As a result of the investigation, the case was submitted to the Ripley County Prosecutor's Office for review. On Oct. 24 a warrant was issued for Hubbard's arrest on one count of reckless homicide, a Class 5 Felony.

Troopers located Hubbard in Pekin, Indiana. She was arrested and taken to Washington County Jail where she is being held without bond pending her extradition to Ripley County Jail where she will appear in the Ripley County Circuit Court.



HENRY M. FINNEY

The aftermath (above) of the June 14 head-on collision that killed Henry M. Finney, of Madison.The crash has now resulted in reckless homicide charges against Shannon M. Hubbard of Pekin.

Finney, a 2016 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School, was a crew member at McDonald's of Madison and was learning to become a manager. He was also a longtime volunteer at the The Waters of Clifty Falls in Madison.

Pickup hits pole, takes 25 hours to repair

By COLLIN OVERTON
Courier staff writer

After last Saturday, Jeff Riley says, he's done with driving.

The 54-year-old Hanover resident was eastbound on S.R. 56 around 5 a.m. Oct. 19, when his truck crossed the median, left the roadway continued opposite the Hanover College entrance, headed into a yard and struck a utility pole supporting Duke Energy power lines.

The collision broke the pole in two places and, at first, knocked out power for two customers, said Angeline Protogere, spokesperson for Duke.

Riley was virtually unharmed.

"It threw me around like a ragdoll," said the 54-year-old Riley, who wasn't wearing a seatbelt at the time of the early-morning collision. But other than some bruising on his chest and skinned-up knees from the dashboard, he was lucky enough not to sustain major injuries.

Riley had just left his home and was going to a dialysis center, a trip he makes three times a week. He told police he did not remember the events leading up to the crash, according to the crash report. A witness who was following behind Riley said he drifted into the oncoming lane of traffic, left the roadway and traveled about 50 yards before hitting the pole, the report said.

What ensued was a daylong process of repairing lines and replacing the utility pole. Although two customers lost power at first, 247 lost power for about 40 minutes as part of the repair process, Protogere said.

Josh Taylor, Jefferson County chief deputy sheriff, said police had to wait until Duke removed the nearby power lines to move the vehicle because the truck was preventing the pole from falling completely. Protogere said Duke crews completed repairs around 6:15 a.m. Sunday morning.

Although unsure of what caused him to lose control, Riley said he suspects it had something to do with being blind in his right eye. He told police he had trouble seeing the roadway properly, the report said.

"You got people coming at you with their lights on, it kind of blinds the other eye," Riley said.

After hitting the pole, Riley said, a woman whose name he doesn't know checked on him, but he was able to get himself out of the truck. Riley said his son, David, drove past the scene, but didn't know it was his father until getting to work and seeing a photo of the crash online.

Traffic on S.R. 56 was not directly affected other than some temporary one-lane-traffic periods, but motorists saw Duke at work all day and into the night. Duke sent its road safety flagging crew to take care of the scene, which was already off the roadway, so no road closure was necessary, Taylor said. He estimated the sheriff's office was only there for 30 minutes to an hour and said Riley was not charged.

From now on, Riley said, his son and Catch-a-Ride are how he'll get to every appointment.

(Above) Riley has been recovering at home in Hanover and feeling better since the crash, after sustaining little injury. Merrillville man charged with 1988 cold case murder, rape

Indiana

MERRILLVILLE — FBI agents have arrested a Merrillville man in the 1988 rape and killing of a 23-year-old mother of four whose body was found in an abandoned home. Tyrone Andrew McKee, 56, was charged Tuesday with murder, rape and other charges in the slaying of Colleen Callahan, according to FBI Public Affairs Specialist Chris Bavender. Callahan's body was found Nov. 9, 1988, in the house in Gary, lying on a floor littered with broken glass and pieces of a window frame. She had several wounds and deep cuts to her legs. An autopsy indicated the cause of death was injuries from a blunt instrument. Authorities re-opened the cold case in 2018 and used modern forensics to connect McKee to the crime. "With the advances in technology, especially DNA, increased resources and once reluctant witnesses now willing to come forward to provide information years later, cases that once did not have enough evidence to charge now become cases that can be prosecuted," said Hobart police Sgt. Nicholas Wardrip, who is also a task force officer for the Indiana unit of the FBI's Gang Responsive Investigative Team, or GRIT. This is the sixth cold case that GRIT has solved in a year, the FBI said.

Chief, deputies resign in dispute with mayor

MICHIGAN CITY — The top brass of Michigan City's police force has resigned in the wake of a dispute with city's mayor. Police Chief Mark Swistek and Assistant Chiefs Royce Williams and Kevin Urbanczyk resigned after disagreements with Mayor Ron Meer over the Laporte County Drug Task Force. A letter of resignation dated Tuesday was posted Thursday on the Michigan City Police Department's Facebook page. According to the letter, Meer directed the police chief to end the department's participation in the task force. Swistek said he is unable to reconcile his oath of office with the directive. In a letter released Thursday, Meer said he has no intention of removing the city's department from the task force. He said he apologized for his choice of words in a heated conversation with Swistek. Meer has accepted the resignations, adding the three are expected to return to their former ranks and continue working with the police department.

USS Indianapolis commissioning Saturday

BURNS HARBOR — The Navy says it will commission its new USS Indianapolis combat vessel at the port of Burns Harbor along Lake Michigan Saturday. The ceremony marking the ship's entry into the Navy's active fleet is set to begin at 11 a.m. It's the fourth military vessel carrying the Indianapolis name. The second USS Indianapolis was sunk by a Japanese submarine in July 1945 while returning from a Pacific island where it delivered key components for the Hiroshima atomic bomb. Only 317 of its nearly 1,200 crewmen survived the sinking and days in shark-infested waters. The new ship was built at a Wisconsin shipyard and will be based near Jacksonville, Florida. It's a Freedom-class littoral ship designed to be highly maneuverable for missions such as mine-clearing and anti-submarine warfare.

Man killed in police shooting ID'd

HUNTINGTON — Police have identified a man who died in an officer-involved shooting in northeastern Indiana. Indiana State Police Sgt. Brian Walker said Vincent Michael Smith, 29, of Huntington died in the shooting Wednesday afternoon at a park in that city about 20 miles southwest of Fort Wayne. Walker said Huntington County and Huntington city officers were called to a home to check on a man considering hurting himself. Walker said officers found the man armed at a park and he didn't comply with officers' commands, and a foot chase ensued. Walker said one officer fired a shot, but it wasn't clear if anyone else did. It wasn't clear what caused the officer to shoot. He said the incident is being investigated as a police-action shooting.

Berne boy accidentally shot dead by sibling

BERNE — Adams County Sheriff Daniel Mawhorr said an 11-year-old boy has died after he was accidentally shot by a younger sibling. Mawhorr said the shooting occurred Wednesday afternoon at a rural address. The victim died before medics could arrive. The name of the dead boy hasn't been released. Mawhorr's office said the incident will be referred to prosecutors for further review.

Parking garage plunge kills Illinois couple

INDIANAPOLIS — Authorities say the man and woman who died when their SUV plunged from the fourth floor of a downtown Indianapolis parking garage are from Illinois. The Marion County Coroner's Office on Thursday identified the couple as Iristeen Hunt, 70, and Charles Hunt, 73, of University Park, Illinois. The car plowed through the wall of the Market Square Center Garage just before 10 a.m. Wednesday, tumbling four floors before landing on its roof in an alley behind the City Market. The couple died at the scene and a man who witnessed the plunge was treated for shock. Fire Department Battalion Chief Rita Reith said the woman was driving. Code enforcement was called to check for structural damage to the garage.

Kentucky

High Court hears pension arguments

FRANKFORT — Government employees in Kentucky who sued over state investment decisions have taken their case to the state's Supreme Court after a lower court said they lacked standing to file suit. The Supreme Court heard arguments in the case Thursday. The fraud suit was filed two years ago by a group of public workers. They claim out-of-state firms cheated Kentucky Retirement Systems on $1.5 billion in hedge-fund investments. The suit was dismissed by Kentucky's Court of Appeals. Defendants' attorney Paul Curnin said allowing the employees to sue would be a "radical departure" that's "contrary to common sense." He said only KRS is qualified to sue. Plaintiffs' attorney Ann Oldfather said since KRS and the attorney general's office failed to take court action over losses from hedge-fund investments, the employees were entitled to act.

Object that hit home remains unidentified

BURGIN — The Federal Aviation Administration said a mysterious object that seemingly dropped from the sky and damaged a Kentucky man's mobile home didn't come from an airplane. Tommy Woosley said a heavy, nearly footlong canister-type object hit his home in Burgin, about 75 miles southeast of Louisville, two weeks ago. But the FAA and Norfolk Southern Railway say their transportation units have nothing to do with the object that lodged into the siding of his home. The National Guard and nearby Fort Campbell military base have also shrugged responsibility. Authorities initially believed the canister might have fallen from a plane, but an FAA spokeswoman said their investigation ruled it out. She said the agency is turning the object over to the Mercer County Sheriff's Office for further investigation.

Ex-Morehead U worker accused of fraud, forgery

MOREHEAD — A former Morehead State University employee is accused of defrauding the school of more than $167,000. Sherri Ward was indicted last week on charges of fraudulent credit card use and second-degree forgery. She pleaded not guilty. She's accused of forging a professor's signature on Morehead State University Foundation fund transfers ranging from $500 to $11,000 and using a university credit card to buy personal goods. The indictment said Ward previously worked at the college's Department of Art and Design. It said the thefts took place between December 2017 and July 2019. It's unclear when Ward left the university and under what circumstances. Ward is set to appear in court in January. It's unclear if she has a lawyer. The university declined to comment, citing the ongoing investigation.

U of L settles naming rights with Schnatter

LOUISVILLE — The University of Louisville Athletic Association will pay Papa John's founder John Schnatter $9.5 million over 5½ years in a settlement to terminate the pizza chain's naming rights to Cardinal Stadium. The school last year removed the Papa John's name and logo from the 60,800-seat football stadium amid fallout from a report that Schnatter used a racial slur during a company conference call. Some Cardinal players had also called for its removal. ULAA and the Board of Trustees approved the agreement Thursday that will immediately pay Schnatter $1.5 million with four subsequent annual payments of $2 million every July. Louisville athletic director Vince Tyra said the settlement allows the school to reclaim and resell naming rights to help pay the remaining installments. The naming rights agreement ran through 2040. Tyra suggested the next deal would be shorter and added, "our intention would be to get that buttoned up by next season."

Murray St. students track turtles with GPS

MURRAY — Some students at Murray State university are using GPS devices to track box turtles and learn about the technology's value. Assistant wildlife biology professor Andrea Darracq said students work in the classroom to build the tracking devices and go into the field at an off-campus university property to locate the turtles. The university said the turtles are tracked with the GPS devices and a transmitter, allowing the students to determine a turtle's location with a receiver and compare it to more precise GPS readings. The school said the capturing and marking of turtles was done with approval from its Institute on Animal Care and Use Committee and a state educational wildlife collection permit.

W.V. governor's companies ordered to pay $35M

LONDON — Companies tied to West Virginia Gov. Jim Justice have been ordered to pay $35 million in damages for defaulting on a mining contract. The suit stems from a 2005 deal in which Kentucky Fuel gained the right to mine coal in Breathitt County in exchange for royalties. The company, operated at the time by Justice, never mined the coal. New London Tobacco Market and its agent, Fivemile Energy LLC, sued in 2012. The $35 million judgment against Kentucky Fuel and the James C. Justice Companies won't end the case. The Justice companies are asking the judge to reconsider how much they will have to pay and vowing to appeal if he doesn't change his mind.

Upholsterer reflects on years of closing St. Meinrad caskets

By ALLEN LAMAN
(Jasper) Herald

"I really struggled with that ... All along, I'm thinking old people that no longer have a quality of life and they're ready to pass, and all of that. And then when you get to a 10-year-old that's supposed to have so much life to live yet ... It was very difficult ... I had to keep telling myself that this is a box. There's a need for this, and I'm filling that need."

Kevin Fleck who has upholstered the interiors of nearly 2,000 monastic-style coffins for Abbey Caskets in Saint Meinrad

The one that bothered Kevin Fleck the most was the little boy.

Like all of the beds he has made for Abbey Caskets in Saint Meinrad, the tulip poplar hardwood coffin was shaped like a boat: jaunting to a narrow head, widening at the shoulders and tapering into a square at the feet.

A terminally ill child who never got to experience the joys of graduating high school, or finding the love of his life, or starting a family, would soon be laid to rest in this wooden box. Kevin's hands would be among the last to touch it.

He has upholstered the interiors of nearly 2,000 monastic-style coffins for the nearby company. Like always, in the case of this soul lost to soon, it was his job to make sure it was made well.

"I really struggled with that," said Kevin, who works as an analyst in the information security section of the IT department at Kimball Electronics.

"All along, I'm thinking [of] old people that no longer have a quality of life and they're ready to pass, and all of that," he said. "And then when you get to a 10-year-old that's supposed to have so much life to live yet ... It was very difficult."

Kevin, 60, puts the finishing touches on 100 caskets a year. It's a craft that connects him to his past, his present and the bookends of thousands of lives.

He started working for the nearby company on the side in the late-1990s, and he admitted that the first coffins he upholstered were "a mind trip." A psychologist could put better words to that feeling, he's sure.

Kevin chose to approach the process with a careful mindset.

"I had to keep telling myself that this is a box," he recalled. "There's a need for this, and I'm filling that need."

It was still hard, of course. Two decades later, it's become easier.

Abbey Caskets sells caskets and coffins that fall largely into two design groups. One is a conventional rectangle. The other, the kind Kevin specializes in, is hexagonal. He is the only person who upholsters that style for the company.

"It's unique," Kevin said of the shape. "It's special. They're all handcrafted, but it does give me a sense of pride to be involved in something as special as that one."

Kevin's father owned an upholstery business, and Kevin grew up in the shop. He stumbled back into the industry by accident later in life when a friend came to him for reupholstery work needed on a chair. Once it was complete, Kevin's buddy pointed another pal his way.

Good reviews continued to spread. Before Kevin knew it, he had his own budding operation. He always loves starting with nothing other than an image or concept and bringing it to life. His creations feel like they are part of him.

Eventually, he repaired and reupholstered furniture for monks and brothers living at the Saint Meinrad Archabbey. That led him to Abbey Caskets, who in the late 1990s, was struggling to stitch the fabric inside their line of purchasable, monastic-inspired caskets. A while after upholstering several prototypes, the company offered him a steady contracted production job.

The beauty of the caskets, Kevin said, is their simplicity. They are designed after the very caskets used by the monks at the archabbey, and the simple design and their lack of complexity "signifies the monastic lifestyle and the monastic ideal," reads the company's website. Each high quality casket is built from various hardwoods in a workshop by local craftsmen.

According to the Catholic faith, when Jesus died, his body was wrapped in muslin cloth and put in a tomb before His resurrection.

Kevin Fleck (right) of Ferdinand and his wife, Kim, work on casket upholstery at Hurst Custom Cabinets in Huntingburg. Kevin grew up in the upholstery business and now upholsters caskets, in addition to his full time job at Kimball Electronics. (Jasper Herald photo by Marlena Sloss)

Falling in line with this, the interior of the locally manufactured monastic caskets are upholstered with the same material.

"A lot of people probably don't realize, but there's that symbolism in that," Kevin explained.

The containers are already cut and constructed by local craftsmen at Abbey Caskets before Kevin begins his work. He cuts and sews the cloth from the basement of his Ferdinand home before taking it to Hurst Custom Cabinets in Huntingburg to install inside the boxes. Foam goes in first, and a nail-gun-like-device tacks up the fabric.

His wife, Kim, has been instrumental in this physical process for 15 years. She calls herself Kevin's gopher, checking his work and helping to maneuver the boxes around the workshop, among other duties.

When they started working together, the deal was that Kim would lend a hand and Kevin would treat her once the work was done.

"I'm cheap help," she said with a smile. "I do it for free, and then a good meal every once in a while. He takes me out."

Even if it doesn't always end with a date, the two cherish the time they spend working together. It gives them a chance to talk about their days and their lives.

In addition to caskets, Kevin does furniture repairs for Bargain Barn. He's also game to "piddle with things that present a challenge," he said, and his resume includes upholstery work for Ferdinand's world-renowned table maker Keith Fritz.

When Kevin tells people about his side hustle, they are surprised. But after explaining it to them, they understand. Someone has to do the work.

And Kevin does it with meticulousness and love.

"He does great quality work," said Jennifer Keller, director of Abbey Caskets. "And it's always nice to work with someone who takes as much pride in their work as what we do in the products that we sell."

Columbus seeks DNR OK for $8.6 million riverfront plan

By SHELBY THOMAS
(Columbus) The Republic

Columbus is filing its application with the Indiana Department of Natural Resources for a proposed $8.6 million riverfront redevelopment.

The more than 300-page application, which is to be filed by end of business on Monday, includes a narrative project description that summarizes the project scope, need for the project, and the project's major components, maps and aerial photographs showing the proposed project location and a quantification of permanent and temporary disturbances and hydraulic modeling information.

Redevelopment director Heather Pope said the US Army Corps of Engineers found that the redevelopment of the riverfront would have no impact on any wetlands that are jurisdictional. The Army Corps of Engineers began studying in July the area between the Robert N. Stewart Bridge and the Third Street bridge where the city has proposed the multi-million dollar riverfront project.

The Army Corp of Engineers takes into consideration the project area, what is being proposed and the city's own calculations of impact to determine if there would be any impacts or loss to wetland habitats or flooding.

A jurisdictional determination by the engineers must be completed when proposing a project that would manipulate the United States' jurisdictional waters, the waters that make up the country's rivers, streams, lakes and oceans, project manager Jason Larrison told The Republic in an earlier interview.

The Army Corps of Engineers previously requested additional data from the city for the west bank because there were indicators, including location, hydrology and vegetation, that a wetland could be present. According to the Army Corps of Engineers, the original delineation had two data points on the entire west bank and none of those points were in the project area.

Pope said the Corps' findings will be included in the project application to DNR.

Hitchcock Design Group is designing the Columbus Riverfront project, an $8.6 million conceptual plan calling for several overlooks of the East Fork White River downtown, connections to the People Trail system and an in-water recreation area.

The project is funded primarily through tax increment financing, or TIF funds, which are received on commercial and industrial properties within the TIF district, Pope said. The city has received a $100,000 grant from the Columbus Park Foundation and is also seeking grants from the Heritage Fund and through Indiana's Next Level Trails Grant program.

The project design incorporates a fish passage channel and a rock arch ramp structure using natural materials, which reduces the amount of grout required in the structure, accommodates boat passage and maintains the river's water level.

It features many many design drivers, including the removal of the lowhead dam, access for safety personnel, maintenance and repair of the river banks, economic and workforce development, ecology, connections, compelling attractions and captivating appearance.

Removal of the low-head dam between Second and Third streets is Hitchcock's number one priority, as it is for the city and DNR. The low-head dam was originally installed a century ago to pool water near the former city pump house for the city's water supply. The former city pump house has been renovated into the Upland Columbus Pump House brewpub.

Pope said the city anticipates a response from DNR in April 2020 and to have all permits in place so the city can develop construction documents and a bid packet, then eventually open the bidding process for interested developers and award a contract to the winning bid.

The new Columbus riverfront design includes a fish passage channel and a rock arch ramp structure (above and below). The fish passage channel and rock arch ramp structure will use natural materials, reducing the amount of grout required for the structure and accommodating boat passage while maintaining the river's water level. Mother fights city board for end to ban on goats that emotionally support son

By JAMES EHLE
(Huntington) Herald-Press

A mother working to find a resolution in her son's emotional support animal case had an opportunity to directly address board members for the first time Monday.

The Huntington Board of Public Works and Safety held an administrative hearing during its Oct. 21 meeting. Mayor Brooks Fetters explained that the administrative hearing is a legal proceeding, not a trial, where parties can submit evidence and are not required to strictly comply with the rules of evidence.

"The purpose of today's administrative hearing is to allow Mr. Wall and Mr. Hartburg to address the board on behalf of their respected clients and address the specific issue raised by Mr. Wall's client of raising two goats," he said.

Attorney Michael Hartburg, representing the City of Huntington, distributed copies of materials dated Oct. 21 to the Board of Public Works and Safety, which were the topic of discussion at the board's executive session between board members and Hartburg.

Attorney Justin Wall represented Tiffany Henderson, the mother who is working to find a resolution in the case involving her son's emotional support animal.

On or about Sept. 4, 2019, an animal control officer posted a notice of ordinance violation 90.09 on the door of the residential property on the 220 block of Taylor Street.

The owner and primary tenant do not dispute there were two goats housed at the property and that the property is less than five acres in size. They contend the city ordinances cannot be enforced against them because the goats serve as emotional support animals for a person with a disability at the property.

Citing various state, federal and local laws, the owner and tenant assert the city should allow a "reasonable accommodation" to allow the animals.

At an Oct. 7 Board of Works meeting, the board determined there was not enough information to make an informed decision on the issue.

Henderson was sworn in at the meeting on Monday and proceeded to read a prewritten statement to the board members. In the statement she addressed Fetters and Huntington Police Chief Chad Hacker. She expressed her frustrations about the lack of communication from the city after multiple attempts to reach out by phone, email and letters on the matter.

"I feel as if the same respect that I have given has not been afforded to me or my family," said Henderson.

Fetters stated the reason the city had remained quiet on the issue was that Henderson "lawyered up." Henderson stated her attorney had given the city's attorney written permission for the city to contact her.

During her first opportunity to address board members directly, she expressed her wishes to come to a resolution with the city. Henderson gave some information on her son, including his autism diagnosis at age four and some of the challenges she has faced as a mom.

She stated how since meeting the goat, her son has shown a deeper understanding of care for another person or thing.

"While the system is set up to help children on the spectrum meet certain goals, there isn't anything that there is that exists to help teach them empathy, sympathy, understanding or emotion," Henderson said. "In my son's case, it's the lack thereof."

Travis Brady was called as a witness to address board members to provide context from a person with a mental disorder, as a man with Asperger syndrome.

"It is not necessarily in the realm of teachers to address the emotional and the social aspects of the disorder. That is more of the medical, therapy, things like that," Brady said.

Henderson stated she followed all of the proper channels, spoke with her son's therapist, acquired proper documentation and did everything in her power to keep the bond her son had formed with his emotional support goat intact.

"I genuinely thought that the documentation I had in combination with state and federal law was enough to appease the city…" Henderson said. "I never intended to violate or disrespect your rules, policies, procedures or ordinances. I never thought that I'd be put in a position that doing right for my son would be to do wrong by the city or others."

Henderson responded to several questions prompted by board members following her written statement.

When board member Dwight Braudigum asked Henderson why her son doesn't take the goat to school with him, she replied, "Because I think that would be unreasonable."

Henderson explained that when her son met the goat, he learned about the fate of the 4-H animals that would be sold in auction for their meat.

Board member Kathy Elmore asked Henderson if she believed the connection between her son and the goat was purely circumstantial (knowing the goat's fate) or if the bond was because of the goat itself.

Henderson said her son didn't learn of the goat's fate until after the connection was formed, and that her son seemed to only care for the fate of the one goat named Oliver. Henderson said the goat has a "humanesque" personality and will walk on a leash, ride in the car and drink coffee.

Henderson also said she's worked at Wall Legal Services with her attorney since April of 2016 or 2017.

"Tiffany, thank you for sharing from your heart and from your experiences," Fetters said. "I appreciate you taking the time to give us insights into what many of our families deal with around the community in regards to emotional and mental disabilities."

Wall cited the complaint that was received in regards to the goats from a neighbor who did not live adjacent to the property. He spoke of potential "drug dealing" activity which has allegedly occurred on the complaining neighbor's street, and stated the person never expressed concerns on that issue. The statement was unable to be verified by any police reports.

Wall stated the issue with the goats first came to light in January 2019 during a welfare check by police officers, but no complaints or actions were made until Sept. 4, 2019.

Braudigum stated he asked a question about the goats at a prior meeting on an unrelated topic of a building permit for the property. Braudigum said he was informed then by Wall that the goats were at the residence "at times."

Wall stated the goats weren't the topic of the prior meeting as his reasoning for not addressing the two goats' residency then.

"We are here before the board now to address that issue of their residency," Wall said. "To whether or not they can stay."

Board of Works member Anthony Lisinicchia referenced an email chain sent between Henderson, Wall and Director of Community Development Brynn Keplinger around July 24. In it, Wall said his "girlfriend fell in love with a goat at the 4-H Fair and is trying to save it from the meat truck."

Henderson said the email was poorly worded and that she fell in love with the goat through her son, after seeing the affection her son had for the goat.

"I think with autism you want to pick and choose your battles," Brady said. "And we can all work together to resolve some of these issues."

Wall said the situation is a landlord-tenant situation that goes beyond the scope of this particular matter.

"Because this is a situation that other people in this community will face whether they be a landlord, whether they be a homeowner, that if they become in that position where the tenant or themselves are required an ESA (emotional support animal) and that ESA doesn't fit into a dog/cat definition, or if they're over the number of dogs or cats that they can keep, then that puts them in violation of the City's rules.

"Just exactly as what we are doing today is a great procedure that needs to be put in place that where if there is ever a request made or needs to be a request made for reasonable accommodation, the same efforts and same standards are applied to address that reasonable accommodation. I would applaud the board for allowing that to happen, giving us procedural ways to do this, and that's what we're here for today."

The Board voted to take the matter under advisement and will issue written findings and conclusions of the proceedings at the Board of Works meeting on Monday, Nov. 18.

Hunters kill 75.5-pound beaver in Owen County

By LAURA LANE
(Bloomington) Herald-Times

SPENCER — On the hunt late Wednesday night for a beaver that was destroying trees and building dams that flooded a man's driveway, Tim O'Brien and Josh Wells encountered a big surprise.

A 75.5-pound male beaver.

"We had been out there a few times and taken other beavers off of his property — once we killed a 40-pounder," O'Brien said. "Forty to 50 pounds is pretty common for a beaver in Indiana. But this one is about twice the size of any I've seen."

He and Wells knew ahead of time that the castor canadensis they had been hired to kill was large, given the height of bite marks on trees on the property where the giant beaver had sharpened his teeth. The rodents are vegetarians and most often cause no harm to humans.

State law allows property owners to kill beavers — the largest rodents in North America — outside of hunting season and without a permit if they are damaging property. But the hunter cannot legally keep the meat or fur outside of the hunting season.

O'Brien wants to keep the pelt of the beaver that was shot, given its size and beauty. He is looking into getting a waiver from the Department of Natural Resources so he can take the animal carcass to a furrier. "I hope I don't have to dispose of it," he said.

For now, O'Brien has stowed the beaver in a freezer. He said the property owner, who lives north of State Road 46 near the Owen-Putnam State Forest, is happy to have the animal gone from the creek that flowed beneath a bridge along his driveway.

"He has had people come through there to work on his house who've told him they had seen it," O'Brien said. "And they said it looked like he had a bear cub in the water."

Former Parke County teacher charged with child seduction

(Terre Haute) Tribune-Star

A former elementary teacher is charged with child seduction after accusatins of a lengthy sexual relationship with a 17-year-old male high school student.

Gina N. Richey, 35, of Terre Haute, was arrested on a Vigo County warrant charging two counts of Level 5 child seduction — a child care worker in sexual intercourse or other sexual conduct — according to a news release from Vigo County Sheriff John Plasse.

She was booked into Vigo County Jail Wednesday afternoon and released on $25,000 cash bond a few minutes later, according to jail records.

Richey's arrest stemmed from an investigation that began in Parke County in September. The criminal conduct, however, was alleged to have taken place in Vigo County, and Parke County authorities turned the investigation over to Vigo County authorities.

The charges allege Richey was having a sexual relationship with a student from Riverton Parke High School and that the relationship had been going on for some time, Sheriff Plasse said.

The Southwest Parke School Corp. had earlier announced a teacher had resigned and a teaching assistant had been terminated during the investigation. The assistant was terminated for reportedly failing to report knowledge of the intimate teacher-student relationship.

Parke County Sheriff Justin Cole has said his office received a report Sept. 30 from the Department of Child Services alleging an intimate relationship between a licensed teacher in the Southwest Parke district with a student from another school within the district.

The school corporation was notified the same day, conducted its own investigation and fully cooperated with the criminal investigation, Sheriff Cole said. The teacher resigned Oct. 3.

Cole, at the time, said the 35-year-old female teacher was alleged to have had a lengthy sexual relationship with a 17-year-old male student.

In Remembrance of

Betty Jean Wood Houghton Moore

Betty Jean Wood Houghton Moore, 94, of Franklin, NC, passed away in her home, surrounded by loved ones on Thursday, October 17, 2019.

Born in Champaign County, IL, Betty was the daughter of the late Dewey and Inez Miller Wood of Huntington, Indiana. In addition to her parents, she was preceded in death by husbands Howard Baker Houghton Jr. (m. 1947-1999) and Charles Lambuth Moore (m. 2001-2011); brother, Robert and sister, Mary Ellen.

Betty attended William Woods College in Missouri and Huntington College in Indiana. She was an active equestrian in her youth and during WWII, a nurse-assistant to the returning wounded. She was an avid hiker and cross-country skier. As an adult with two young children, Betty made time to get her teaching credential and taught students in Trimble County, Kentucky and Madison, Indiana, finishing her career as a beloved educator in Portage, Wisconsin. She focused on High School U.S. History, Economics, and her favorite subject, World History. During her retirement with Howard Houghton in Wisconsin, they started a Pottery and Weaving Studio business. She was also VP and President of Friends of the MacKenzie Environmental Center in nearby Poynette, WI.

Moving to Franklin, NC in 1996, she was active with the Scottish Tartan Museum, Weaving and Spinning Exhibitors, Women's Weavers Guild and supporter of the Nature Conservancy. She read and traveled widely and her interest in genealogy led her to cross the country and Scotland researching records and documenting her ancestors' origins. She published a book, "History of Isaac, John, and Noah Wood Family" and assisted with the writing of a second with husband Howard Houghton, "Our Houghton Heritage." Both are now found in libraries throughout our country. She and Howard (and later Charles) were members of the First Presbyterian Church. She was a staunch supporter of the Democratic party. To the end, she remained a bird watcher, a pianist and lover of classical and jazz music, a gardener, a fabulous listener and everyone's best friend.

She is survived by two children – Dr. Robert S. Houghton (Janaye) of Sylva, NC and Stephany Cavalier Houghton (Dr. Stevan Cavalier) of Walnut Creek, CA; five grandchildren - Jordan Cavalier (Michele) of Brooklyn, NY, Amelia Cavalier of Washington, DC, Aaron Houghton (Sarah) of Boulder, CO, Dr. Damon Houghton, MD (Jaclyn) of Rochester, MN, and Bryon Houghton (Andrea) of Charlotte, NC, and five great grandchildren.

Betty's calm wisdom and boundless love will be missed by all who felt blessed to have known her.

A Celebration of Life service is being planned for Saturday of Mother's Day weekend, May 9, 2020 at the First Presbyterian Church of Franklin, NC.

Preferred memorials are to the Nature Conservancy (nature.org).
Macon Funeral Home is handling the arrangements. Condolences and written memories of Betty can be sent to the family at www.maconfuneralhome.com.

Indiana one of country's top pumpkin growers

"...massive array of shapes, sizes, colors and flavors"

By EMMA EA AMBROSE
Purdue University News Bureau

Hinkypunks. Hobby lanterns. Fairy lights. Corpse candles. Fool's fire.

All of these whimsical names, which originated in Ireland, once referred to the other-worldly lights of evil spirits that would appear in the night above bogs and swamplands.

Centuries before science would explain away these ethereal flares as the ignition of decomposing plant matter coming into contact with heat or electricity, they were regarded with a healthy dose of Celtic reverence and unease. The custom of carving faces in turnips or potatoes, hollowing them out and illuminating them from the inside became a common practice in Ireland, one meant to off evil spirits on certain holidays, namely the eve of All Saint's Day.

The mysterious bog lights went by one other name, recognizable to most even today — Jack o' Lantern. One of the spirits wandering among the bogs was rumored to be that of Stingy Jack. Jack, who had bartered with Satan and lost, a common enough outcome for anyone foolish enough to gamble with the devil. As punishment, Jack was condemned to roam the mortal realm as a spirit with only a smoldering ember in a hollowed-out turnip to light his way.

This tale, imported to the U.S. in its many iterations, is how the carved pumpkins of today with their gnarled grins and monstrous miens became known as Jack o' Lanterns.

For as many tellings of Stingy Jack, there are infinitely more varieties of pumpkins, the vessel that immortalized Jack and his ill-fated wager.

"There are hundreds of pumpkin varieties, " said Elizabeth Maynard, clinical engagement associate professor of horticulture and landscape architecture. "They are originally native to Central and South America. If you include all the various species of pumpkins, also known as winter squashes, there's a massive array of shapes, sizes, colors and flavors."

Some of the most common kinds, especially those associated with Halloween, are the aptly named Jack o' Lantern pumpkins, characterized by smooth skin, rich orange color and a round or oblong shape. Cinderella pumpkins, with a flat shape and orange hue, and Flat White Boer pumpkins can commonly be found in decorative arrangements during the fall months. And the pumpkin found most commonly in cans bellies as opposed to centerpieces? That is most likely a variety of Cucurbita moschata, Maynard said, known for its rich flavor and appealing texture.

While Ireland may take the cake — or the pumpkin pie — in terms of crafting Halloween's foundational mythology, they can't hold a candle to Indiana in terms of pumpkin production.

Indiana consistently ranks as one of the top five states for pumpkin cultivation in the country, producing over 100 million pounds of pumpkins in 2018.

"In Indiana, the growing season is long enough and temperatures warm enough that a pumpkin crop can mature and produce good yields," Maynard continued. "There is usually enough rain that even without irrigation the crop will survive and yield."

While Indiana has favorable growing conditions for pumpkins, Daniel Egel, clinical engagement associate professor of botany and plant pathology, said they are a temperamental crop. As they take root pumpkins like it to be wet but not too wet and as they mature they prefer warm weather but not too warm.

"It has been a difficult year for pumpkin growers in Indiana for the same reason it's been difficult for those growing corn," Egel said. "Mainly, there was too much rain initially and in the following months it was too hot. We've also seen diseases imperiling crops this year around the state."

Currently, the two main threats to pumpkin crops in Indiana, Egel continued, are Phytophthora (pronounced fahy-tof-ther-uh), a fungal blight that more closely resembles brown algae than fungus, and a virus spread by aphids, which can lead to warty pumpkins.

"I always tell growers to choose their fields carefully. If you select a field that is low and poorly drained it will be more susceptible to Phytophthora. And if you develop Phytophthora it can be difficult to eliminate because the typical fungicides aren't effective against it," Egel explained.

Despite their capricious nature, pumpkins are a Halloween staple in Indiana and around the country. variety can be carved or converted into a festive decoration.

"I always tell people 'if you see a pumpkin you like, that's the one you should take home.' Of course, you want to make sure there are no soft spots and the stem is long enough to grip, but whatever the shape or size, whether it's smooth or bumpy, orange or green, if you like it then it's the right choice," Egel said.

Smoke detectors, pets alert resident to East 2nd fire

MARK CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer

Smoke detectors and family pets awakened a resident in the 400 block of East Second Street well before dawn Wednesday to discover the home filling with smoke.

The early, potentially life-saving warnings left just enough time to call for help and escape the structure without injury.

When Madison firefighters arrived at about 5:30 a.m. at the scene, a building that houses the Colonial Flower Shop at 406 East Second St. and a residence at 408 East Second, the incident was upgraded immediately to a working structure fire with heavy fire involvement on the rear of the structure. Flames soon were visible high above the second story roof and winds carried a large and growing plume of smoke to the south.

"Fire and police quickly obtained information that one of the involved structures was unoccupied and all occupants had exited the attached structure," said Madison Fire Chief Bill Devries. "Suppression efforts were put in place to not only extinguish the fire itself, but to also protect the other structures to their proximity. The main fire was brought under control in approximately an hour and a half; however, due to the building construction there were several areas that were not easily reached by fire crews. And those areas had to be exposed to fully extinguish the fire and remove the smoke from the structures."

Firefighters ended up battling the fire until well after daybreak, their task made difficult by limited access to the rear location of the blaze, the height of the brick home and the tall trees that line the 400 block of East Second Street at streetside.

Walnut Fire Company No. 4 battled the blaze from above using the company's 2007 American LaFrance tower truck's massive pump platform extended high above Second Street to stream water down onto the structure as other firefighters worked to gain access from inside.

In addition to City of Madison Fire and Police Departments, several other agencies responded to the incident including King's Daughters Health EMS, The Salvation Army, Duke Energy, Vectren Gas and the City of Madison Street Department.

There were no injuries reported from the residence or the ensuing effort to suppress the fire.

Devries said the cause of the fire is under investigation by the Madison Fire Department, Madison Police Department and the Indiana State Fire Marshall's Office. Firefighters remained at the scene until well into the afternoon.

The building, listed as 6,482 square feet, is owned by Jennifer Bates, who operates the first-floor florist shop on the west side of the structure.

Devries said the incident serves as a reminder that Madison Fire Department has a free smoke detector installation program.

To be placed on the installation list for detectors or batteries for your existing ones, call 812-265-8350 and leave your name, address, phone number and mention the smoke detector program and you will be contacted to set up an appointment.

GIRLS GOLFER OF THE YEAR

‘Professional demeanor’ serves Eder well on the links

The season couldn’t have started off much worse for Keara Eder. The Madison High School sophomore shot a 90 in her first golf match of the season at the Bloomington South Invitational, a result that left her and her coach scratching her heads.

But it didn’t take Eder long to return to her normal, dominating self and embark on a season that saw her win her second-straight sectional championship and become the first Lady Cub to qualify for the state finals in five years.

“I started out the season pretty rough in my first 18-hole match, but I kinda got it back a little bit,” Eder said. “My scores were a bit up and down and I was just struggling to put everything together at once. But around sectional and regional time, it started to come together.”

It’s for that reason and many others that Eder is The Madison Courier’s Girls Golfer of the Year. The odds-on favorite for medalist nearly every time she stepped on the course, Eder has already set herself up to become one of the best golfers in program history.

“Keara’s success is not a new development. She has been playing golf since she was a small girl, and she has been preparing for a season like this for a long time,” Madison coach Jake Shockley said. “She plays in numerous tournaments in the summer, as well. Those off-season tournaments provided her with knowledge of other golfers and she even developed friendships with other golfers all across the state. Keara told me that she had been in playoffs in those summer tourneys in the past, and that helped her in her regional playoff.”

Although just halfway through her high school career, Eder has played more golf than some players twice her age. Ever since she was old enough to swing a club, she’s been on the links, firing away.

“Keara’s mental toughness is almost second to none. Her demeanor reminds you of a professional golfer out there. No matter how good the shot, or how bad, you almost never see it affect her outwardly. She just focuses on the next task or challenge, which is a great thing about golf.”
Madison coach Jake Shockley

That level of experience allowed her to overcome that rough start to the season. Just four days after her rough turn in Bloomington, Eder claimed low-medalist honors in the New Albany Invitational, leading the Cubs to a runner-up finish.

“Keara’s mental toughness is almost second to none. Her demeanor reminds you of a professional golfer out there. No matter how good the shot, or how bad, you almost never see it affect her outwardly,” Shockley said. “She just focuses on the next task or challenge, which is a great thing about golf. Your preparation and execution dictate your outcomes, but it doesn’t always work out. You just have to do your best with your current situation. I have no doubt Keara can take her current attitude and be successful wherever life takes her.”

That attitude allowed her to survive a pressure cooker of a playoff in the regional to earn the chance at the state finals. And although the final tournament of the season didn’t go as planned — she finished 56th after shooting identical rounds of 88 at Prairie View Golf Club — she knows that just getting to the finals was a big first step.

“I’m right on track with my goals. I’m glad I got to make it to state this year and it was a really good experience,” Eder said. “I got to see a lot of my friends again that I don’t normally get to see during the season.”

Hanover men’s soccer scored two goals in the final 27 minutes to claim a 2-1 win at Transylvania on Wednesday and hand the Pioneers their first HCAC loss.

The win allowed Hanover to join Transy and Rose-Hulman in a three-team tie for the conference lead at 5-1.

Transylvania (8-6, 5-1 HCAC) scored first on a goal by Max Nusbacher in the 38th minute. The Pioneers maintained that lead until the 64th minute when Carlos Schryver, a sophomore from Sao Paulo, Brazil, tied the game for Hanover with a goal off a cross pass by Josh Hughes.

Patrick Rowe, a sophomore from Terre Haute, then put in the game-winner in the 73rd minute off an assist by Evan Redmon.

Hanover held a 15-5 advantage in shots including 5-3 on goal. The Pioneers had 13 fouls to three by the Panthers.

Will Bedel, a junior from Walton, Kentucky, stopped two shots in goal for Hanover to record the save.

Purdue hoping to add new chapter in replacement story

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

Purdue coach Matt Painter turned the page on the Carsen Edwards era long ago.

Now he expects everyone else to do the same.

Seven months after Edwards nearly led Purdue to the Final Four and four months after he was drafted by the NBA, Painter finds himself contemplating how the next chapter in the Boilermakers' recurring replacement story could go.

"I think trying not to be like that team is going to be really important," he said. "No one is going to take over Carsen's role for us. We didn't have a Carsen Edwards before, and let's not have one afterward. I think that's important in basketball, because I think a lot of times people say you're going to come in and you're going to play the same role as this guy, when in reality you're just going to be the best version of yourself."

Painter's consistent messages have played out just fine over the years.

After saying goodbye to four seniors and three 1,000-point scorers following a Big Ten runner-up finish in 2017-18, Painter gave Edwards the green light and surrounded him with enough 3-point shooters to keep defenses honest. The result: Purdue captured a share of the regular-season crown and made its deepest tourney run in nearly two decades.

How will Painter adapt this time? It sounds as if he'll play a more traditional style.

"Each team is different, even if you have a lot of experience," he said. "I think that's important for us to kind of learn — we played a lot different than we did the previous year — and I look at us doing a lot of the same things (this season) but in a different way."

The Boilermakers could revert to their big lineup with 7-foot-3 center Matt Haarms, 270-pound power forward Trevon Williams, 6-9 small forward Aaron Wheeler and 6-7 guard Nojel Eastern.

They could opt to stretch the floor with 3-point shooters such as Wheeler and Sasha Stefanovic, freshmen Isaiah Thompson and Brandon Newman or perhaps Eastern, who's been working on his shooting touch.

They can still rely on depth. But amid all the changes, Painter intends to make sure there are two constants when the Boilermakers open the season Nov. 6 against Green Bay: A staunch defense and few turnovers.

"The people around Carsen Edwards took care of the basketball, they made good decisions," Painter said.

GRAD TRANSFER

Senior Jahaad Proctor became the second grad transfer on the roster when he decided to leave High Point. The 6-foot-3 guard joins forward Evan Boudreaux, who arrived from Dartmouth last season. Proctor has scored more than 1,000 points in two seasons with High Point and one at Iona and he finished last season with 16 consecutive double-figure games. He was a second team all-Big South selection and was the conference's scholar-athlete of the year.

NEW LINE

Extending the 3-point line from 20 feet, 9 inches to the new distance of 22-1¾ could impact college games all around the country this season. Painter doesn't expect it to create any significant changes, though.

"I think the guys that can make 3s, it's probably not going to bother much," he said. "The guys that are trying to be 3-point shooters, it's really going to bother."

THE REMATCH

Purdue seemed headed for the Final Four after taking a three-point lead with only six seconds left in the South Regional championship.

But Virginia made one free throw, got a lucky bounce and tossed in a buzzer-beater to force overtime — before winning the national championship. That's not the kind of ending anybody around the program will soon forget especially with the rematch set for Dec. 4 in the ACC-Big Ten Challenge at Purdue.

"It'll be very difficult for us," Painter said. "They lost a lot, we lost a lot. But whenever you play them, it's very difficult to go against them. They're very stingy on defense, very efficient on the offensive end."

Second-ranked UK looks to veterans for leadership

By GARY B. GRAVES
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. — John Calipari appreciates discussing the players who returned to Kentucky instead of focusing on who left.

That's understandable considering the second-ranked Wildcats have experience in the backcourt and inside, which helps offset their annual roster changeover.

Four regulars, including starting point guard Ashton Hagans, return from a 30-7 team (15-3 Southeastern Conference) that lost in overtime to SEC rival Auburn in the Elite Eight. Despite the change of pace for Calipari's program to be discussing veterans, the coach warns that putting things together might take more work this season.

But Calipari is optimistic about the Wildcats' long-term prospects of pursuing a ninth national championship.

"Some of the best teams I've coached weren't full rosters," the 11th-year coach said earlier this month.

"Part of it is going to be in the games (where) we've got to get them to understand we're going to have to take it up a notch. The main thing for me will be how do we rebound and how tough are we physically?"

Having Hagans and Immanuel Quickley in the backcourt and Nick Richards and EJ Montgomery in the middle will help answer some of those questions.

Hagans' return after averaging 7.8 points and 4.3 assists per game last season is significant. He announced he would be back for a second season before teammates PJ Washington, Tyler Herro and Keldon Johnson became first-round NBA draft picks. Hagans hopes to build on a rookie year that established him as one of the nation's top on-ball defenders.

Calipari has recruited backcourt help in freshmen Tyrese Maxey, Johnny Juzang and Dontaie Allen, who's recovering from knee and shoulder injuries. Hagans is prepared to lead Kentucky wherever he's needed and is encouraged by what he has around him.

"You've just got to just show (Calipari) that you're ready, that you're out here fighting and going to compete against everybody," said Hagans, the SEC's co-defensive Player of the year.

"We've got four guys back that have a leadership role on this team, and that's what we're going to need to be at our best."

Some other things to look for during the Kentucky's 2019-20 season:

SHORT ON SIZE

The return of Richards, a 6-11 junior, and 6-10 Montgomery provide post experience, but Kentucky's height drops off drastically with 6-9 grad transfer Nick Sestina the next tallest player. Richards and Montgomery appear ready for more minutes but they'll be challenged to avoid foul trouble.

The frontcourt newcomers include 6-7 Keion Brooks and 6-6 Kahlil Whitney. Calipari said smaller lineups could frequently result to give his post men a break and mitigate foul issues. The Wildcats' upside is length throughout the roster, which could help with rebounding and spreading opponents out defensively.

VETERAN NEWCOMER

Former Bucknell forward Nate Sestina is Kentucky's latest grad transfer with expectations of providing leadership like predecessor Reid Travis. Sestina averaged 15.8 points and 8.5 rebounds last season to earn second team All-Patriot League honors. He has drawn attention for dropping weight and becoming one of Kentucky's more chiseled players.

"I feel the best I've ever felt, and I've played basketball for four years," he said.

FINDING OFFENSE

The Wildcats return just 27% of their scoring from last season, led by Hagans and Quickley (5.2 points per game). Tyrese Maxey and Johnny Juzang are projected as the likely shooters, though Hagans and Quickley seem primed to take more shots this season. Sestina has shown long range potential.

SERVING NOTICE

Quickley's offseason improvement has drawn praise from Calipari. The sophomore not only looks more muscular than last season, but is showing aggression. Quickley will likely play off the ball but handles the ball well enough to be able to spell Hagans at the point. "I've been working on my body," he said, "changing a lot of parts of my game, just working to be the all-around best player I can be. My mindset has changed."

THE SCHEDULE

Kentucky again opens the season with a big test on Nov. 5 against top-ranked Michigan State at the Champions Classic in New York. December features a steady docket of Power Five opponents including consecutive matchups against Utah and Ohio State in Las Vegas and a home showdown against rival and No. 5 Louisville before beginning SEC play against Missouri. The Wildcats visit national runner-up Texas Tech in the Big 12/SEC Challenge on Jan. 25.

High expectations for No. 5 Cards

By GARY B. GRAVES
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Louisville coach Chris Mack said he isn't buying the hype. He's making sure the No. 5 Cardinals don't, either.

He wants his players to know it is up to them to do something buzzworthy.

In many ways Louisville did that in Mack's first season, going from a scandal-marred program to NCAA Tournament participant. The Cardinals even upset Michigan State and North Carolina before limping down the stretch and getting bounced in the NCAA's first round.

Mack reminds players of the early tourney exit to help maintain perspective amid the preseason noise.

"I thought we exceeded a lot of expectations," he said during the Atlantic Coast Conference's preseason media day. "It also left a bitter taste in our mouths losing eight of the last 10, whatever it was.

"So, despite all the fanfare, all the preseason prognosticators and covers of magazines and all that stuff, I try to tell our guys: Don't drink that poison. We haven't done anything yet, and we're the same team that felt as low as we did in the NCAA Tournament at the end of the year."

The Cardinals (20-14, 10-8 ACC) plan to use the disappointing finish as motivation in building off what was supposed to be a transitional season.

They return six regulars, most notably top scorer and ACC preseason player of the year Jordan Nwora (17 points, 7.6 rebounds per game). He came back for a third season after participating in last summer's NBA draft combine along with fellow forward Steven Enoch.

If not for a knee injury that limited the 6-foot-7, 225-pound forward in combine drills and scrimmages, Nwora might have stayed in the draft pool. Instead, he's a key to Louisville's quest for a deep postseason run following a breakout year on both ends of the floor.

Mack's goal is making sure Nwora doesn't take on too much responsibility with capable teammates such as 6-11 Malik Williams, 6-10 Enoch and 6-5 Dwayne Sutton.

"What needs to be different is we are not solely reliant on him," the coach said of Nwora. "Not that we were a year ago. But I think when you have the ability to take over a game like he does, sometimes you're overzealous, you're over-aggressive and he doesn't need to be."

Mack also recruited an impressive class including All-American forward Samuell Williamson and guard David Johnson, a Louisville native.

Other things to watch in Louisville's season:

UNDERMANNED

The Cardinals won't be at full strength until January as Johnson and Williams recover from offseason injuries. Williams underwent foot surgery in September and could return early next month. Johnson had July shoulder surgery that's expected to sideline him four to six months. Freshman forward Quinn Slazinski is recovering from appendicitis.

PERRY'S PERSISTENCE

Junior guard Darius Perry acknowledges struggling to learn Mack's system before figuring it out late last season as a reserve. He improved during the offseason and could have more responsibility now that he has a better grasp.

"I wasn't sure what shots I was supposed to take or what he wanted me to actually do defensively sometimes," Perry said. "This year, I think I'm almost 100% any time I'm on the floor."

"FRESH" FACE

Guard Lamarr "Fresh" Kimball was a three-time captain at St. Joseph's before arriving in Louisville as a graduate transfer. He averaged 11.4 points and 3.2 assists per game with the Hawks, including a career-best 15.6 points last season. The projected point guard follows Christen Cunningham, another grad transfer who was the Cardinals' floor general last year.

FAMILIAR LOGOS

The "Dunking Cardinal" logo featured during Louisville's old glory days is back as the center court logo at the team's KFC Yum! Center arena. The baseline design on Denny Crum Court also pays homage to the old scorer's table signage from Freedom Hall along with the fleur de lis pattern in the corners honoring the city flag.

THE SCHEDULE

Louisville opens on Nov. 5 with an ACC matchup at Miami (Florida), its earliest opener in school history. Pittsburgh visits on Dec. 6 in another ACC game. The Cardinals' non-conference schedule includes Michigan, NCAA runner-up Texas Tech and their annual rivalry showdown at rival and No. 2 Kentucky on Dec. 28.

IU hoping to make noise behind Phinisee's louder voice

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON — Rob Phinisee understands the secret to being an effective point guard, how he must find the proper balance between being an aggressive scorer and a creative distributor.

This season, Indiana coach Archie Miller asked his sophomore ball-handler to focus on another critical skill: developing a strong enough voice to help the Hoosiers make some noise in the Big Ten race.

"The younger guys who have gotten a year under their belt have changed," Miller said. "Robert has done a really nice job in our workouts. He's made a concerted effort to communicate better, talk better, not be quiet."

If last season demonstrated anything it was how much of an impact Phinisee can have on the Hoosiers' success.

The 6-foot-1 prep star arrived on campus as one of the feature attractions in a highly-touted recruiting class led by the state's then reigning Mr. Basketball Award winner, Romeo Langford. Both quickly won starting jobs. Both played key roles in a promising start that included Phinisee's decisive buzzer-beating 3-pointer in a 71-68 victory over Butler in mid-December.

Then in the next game, Phinisee took a knee to the head, was diagnosed with a concussion and struggled to regain his early-season form. Over the next 15 games, Phinisee made more than two baskets only once as Indiana went 3-12.

But when Phinisee played well over the final month, so did the Hoosiers, who turned things around and played their back way into the NCAA Tournament discussion. The Hoosiers finished 19-16, falling one win short of the NIT semifinals.

Now, with Langford off to the NBA, Miller needs the naturally soft-spoken Phinisee to become a more assertive leader on the court and an equally vocal leader in the locker room. Phinisee has embraced the challenge.

"I want to be better than I was last season," he said. "Just being a leader really, being a leader with my teammates and I feel like that will take us a long way."

Miller knows it. And so does everyone else around the program as the Nov. 5 season opener against Western Illinois nears.

"He's traditionally a pretty safe guy," Miller said, describing Phinisee's playing style. "He has had a lot of experience under his belt. He's been through a lot in his one year. He's more prepared to handle the communication part of it, and he knows that's a big part of his job."

GOING BIG

The most obvious difference between last season's team and this one — size. Adding 6-7 freshman Trayce Jackson-Davis and 6-11 redshirt junior Joey Brunk, a transfer from Butler, gives the Hoosiers a roster with seven players listed at 6-7 or taller. Miller acknowledges going big will have an impact on how Indiana plays this season.

"We have to utilize our versatility with the guys that can play multiple positions," Miller said. "And we are going to have to move that ball. To do that, you're going to have a lot of concepts and action to the way you play. I'm excited to coach this team in that regard."

FRESH FACES

Miller won two more key in-state recruiting battles last fall by convincing guard Armaan Franklin and Jackson-Davis to play in Bloomington.

The Hoosiers believe Franklin can provide scoring punch after he averaged 23.0 points last season at Indianapolis Cathedral. Fans expect Jackson-Davis, the son of former Indiana Pacers forward Dale Davis and a McDonald's All-American, to make the most immediate impact.

But for now, Jackson-Davis is taking things slowly.

"I'm really just focused on getting our team, getting the chemistry down, trying to fit in," he said.

THE OTHER VOICE

Brunk spent the previous three seasons at Butler, logging his most productive statistics last season when he averaged 7.6 points, 3.6 rebounds and shot 61.7% from the field.

He'll play an important role on the floor, but with five freshmen or sophomores in Miller's projected rotation, Brunk may be more valuable as the voice of experience.

"Because we do have a group of guys that naturally are kind of quiet natured. I think that's where Joey has been a great boost," Miller said. "His personality has really helped our workouts, our locker room."

Pacers drop opener to Detroit

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Andre Drummond softened up the perimeter by hammering away in the middle. Luke Kennard finally took advantage late.

It was quite an opening-night combination for the Detroit Pistons.

Drummond scored 32 points, grabbed 23 rebounds and blocked four shots while Kennard made half of his career-high six 3-pointers in the final six minutes to help the Pistons pull away for a 119-110 victory over the Indiana Pacers on Wednesday night.

The Pacers had billed their opener as the debut of a new era complete with four new starters and a retro lineup with 6-foot-11 Myles Turner and 6-11 Domantas Sabonis playing alongside one another.

But Drummond and Kennard ruined the big unveil.

The league's three-time rebounding champ was a wrecking ball right from the start, knocking down 12 of 18 shots and even making his last eight free throws after missing the first two. Kennard warmed up late, scoring 16 of his career-high 30 points in the final 11 minutes.

Indiana never recovered. Sabonis had 27 points and 13 rebounds and Malcolm Brogdon added 22 points in his first game with the Pacers.

The teams combined for 33 turnovers and 29 fouls resulting in a back-and-forth game in which neither team seized control for long.

Red alert: Broncos, Colts prepare for test of strengths

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis has been red hot when it comes to scoring inside the 20-yard line.

The Denver Broncos have been incredibly proficient protecting the red zone.

On Sunday, the Colts' confident offense and the Broncos' stingy defense will square off in a clash pitting strength against strength.

"Guys have a good feel for what we're trying to do down there and we've done a good job of executing," Denver coach Vic Fangio said. "We've played the run well down there when they have run it of late. And we've made some plays in the passing game. It's just we've played good."

Denver has not allowed a touchdown on 10 consecutive red zone trips, the last being a third-quarter score by Jacksonville in Week 4 — nearly 200 minutes in game time.

The problem: Kansas City still scored 30 points and handed Denver (2-5) its worst loss of the season, and now the Broncos must face one of the league's most opportunistic teams.

Indianapolis (4-2) scored touchdowns on all four red zone trips last week against Houston, making the Colts 15 of 23 this season — sixth in the NFL in touchdown percentage (65.2).

Denver, in contrast, is 26th in touchdown percentage at 47.4.

Coach Frank Reich believes the Colts' success is no secret.

"It's everybody making plays, right?" he said. "But it does start at quarterback and Jacoby (Brissett) has been doing a really good job. Houston goes 2-for-5, we go 4-for-4. When you're playing, two good teams, that's what it's going to come down to."

Plus, the Colts have run the ball effectively, and they've been creative — for example, using All-Pro guard Quenton Nelson in a pass pattern last week.

But with perennial Pro Bowl linebacker Von Miller, veteran cornerback Chris Harris Jr. and longtime defensive lineman Derek Wolfe up next, the Colts know the challenge they face.

"Obviously they have standout players but they're just a really good group of guys playing very well," Brissett said. "They're playing the system very well. It's going to take a full game from us because you see no weakness in their defense."

HOOKER RETURNS

Starting safety Malik Hooker is expected to be back in the lineup Sunday after missing the last three games with a torn meniscus.

Getting another playmaker back on the field should only help make Indy's improving defense even better.

"He had a great minicamp, training camp and first part of the year," defensive coordinator Matt Eberflus said. "This is the best we've all seen him look. We're excited to get him back and we're excited for the roles he's going to play."

TRICK OR TREAT

Zach Pascal might not match last week's nearly perfect game. The second-year Colts receiver hopes to top it, though.

He caught six of seven passes Brissett threw his way, finished with 106 yards and two scores and was lauded by coaches for his downfield blocking, too. But there was one play Pascal wanted back — an overthrow to a wide-open Nyheim Hines that probably would have been a touchdown on the "Jackie Moon" play.

"I choked," said Pascal, who scored later on the drive. "I just missed him. I make that throw in practice all the time."

Taylor's Bengals follow footsteps of McVey's Rams

By GREG BEACHAM

Zac Taylor is finding it a whole lot harder than his former boss did to engineer a one-year transformation of a longtime losing franchise.

The fans of England will see whether Taylor's rough project can break through against Sean McVay's much more polished work when the Cincinnati Bengals (0-7) face the defending NFC champion Los Angeles Rams (4-3) on Sunday.

Taylor hopes his winless Bengals will look across the Wembley Stadium field to see what they hope to become — and hopefully start to make it happen a little faster.

"It doesn't happen overnight," Taylor said. "It doesn't happen Week 1, Week 5 or necessarily Week 7. But at some point, it clicks to where more and more guys start to understand it, and the standard is raised. It transfers over to Sunday, it transfers over to wins and it transfers over to championships, and that's what we're striving for."

When McVay took over the Rams nearly three years ago, he both inherited and assembled the ingredients to build a great offense immediately. Todd Gurley, Jared Goff and Rob Havenstein were already on the roster, and the Rams quickly added Robert Woods, longtime Bengals left tackle Andrew Whitworth and a host of supporting players to create one of the greatest one-season turnarounds in NFL history.

When Taylor left his job as the Rams' quarterbacks coach to take over the Cincinnati Bengals last winter, he brought intimate knowledge of McVay's offense and the wisdom of two years behind the Rams' curtain. He installed an offense quite similar to McVay's schemes, and he is calling the Bengals' plays himself, just as McVay does for LA.

Trouble is, the Bengals had a fraction of the resources available to McVay, and they clearly didn't add talent with the same success. Their running game is the NFL's worst behind a poor offensive line, which means the McVay offense's play-action schemes aren't fooling anybody.

And Cincinnati's standout offensive player — receiver A.J. Green — still hasn't returned from ankle surgery in training camp.

Taylor and McVay have talked frequently during the season, although the calls and texts slowed as they approached this meeting. They've both had plenty of work to do: McVay's Rams had a three-game losing streak that left him searching for new ways to get the past two seasons' results, particularly since his play-action success has also stalled with a mediocre running game.

"You learn a lot about people when you go through some of these adversities," McVay said. "I thought it was good for us to be able to go through some of these things we've experienced over the last month. I have talked to Zac. I have a whole lot of respect for him. I love him as a friend. To see the way that he's handled things only further demonstrates why he's a special person."

More to know about the 22nd NFL game played at Wembley since 2007:

HELLO OLD FRIEND

The Bengals will be reunited with Whitworth, who spent 11 seasons in Cincinnati before going to the Rams. Whitworth was one of the Bengals' leaders and best players, and he has stayed in touch with some former teammates. The Bengals' offensive line fell apart after they chose not to match the Rams' contract offer, and Whitworth reached the Super Bowl with LA last season. The Bengals haven't won a playoff game since the 1990 season and are well on their way to a fourth straight losing season.

"Whit was really good for us," quarterback Andy Dalton said. "I loved every year that I got to play with him. You see the business of it. He had an opportunity in LA, and he took it. Is he the reason things haven't been exactly the same? I don't know. Whit was a big part of this team and a big part of the leadership on this team."

RUNNING ON EMPTY

Cincinnati remains winless because of a bad combination: The Bengals have the worst run offense and the worst run defense in the league. They've been held under 35 yards rushing in four of their games. In a 27-17 loss to the Jaguars last week, Dalton accounted for all 33 net yards. Also, they've given up at least 200 yards rushing in the past three games and four times overall.

"Being one-dimensional is hard," offensive coordinator Brian Callahan said. "There are a lot of things that make it difficult when you have to drop back and throw the ball. The running game standard has got to be higher and we've got to do a better job of it."

Women beat Transy

Hanover women's soccer got goals from three different players to post a 3-1 victory at Transylvania on Wednesday.

Brandi Brock, a senior from Cincinnati, got the scoring started with a goal in the 10th minute and Anna Smith, a sophomore from Cincinnati, added a marker in the 26th minute for a 2-0 halftime lead. Both goals were unassisted.

After Brett Edwards cut the margin in half with a goal for Transylvania (5-8-2, 3-2-1 HCAC) in the 69th minute, Kayla Nowlin, a senior from Harrison, Ohio, scored Hanover's final goal in the 85th minute off an assist from Autumn Boothby.

Hanover out-shot Transylvania 22-7, including 14-5 on goal. Amanda Carmosino, a sophomore from Noblesville, had four saves in goal for the Panthers.

Hanover, now 8-5-1 overall and 5-1 in the HCAC, stands a point back of conference leader Rose-Hulman (5-0-1) The Panthers host Anderson on Saturday and Mount St. Joseph on Wednesday.

•Keara Eder

"I think she can use this season as a springboard to even greater future success kind of like Michael Jordan had to get past the first round of the playoffs, and then the Detroit Pistons, to become an NBA champion," Shockley said. "Maybe she can use this experience to become an even more elite player. I mean, she's only a sophomore. To come from a 3A school this far south in the state to make the state finals is a pretty big deal. I think she can get back there two more times with even better results, but if she doesn't, that's OK, too. It was an amazing season."

While Eder had a terrific individual season, she was as equally happy with the way her team performed. A close-knit group, Madison claimed the program's first sectional title since 2016.

"I don't really remember most of the matches, but playing with the girls was fun. Our team this year was really great," Eder said. "We got along really well. It was really fun just to practice with all of the girls that we have this year. We were really close."

Eder already has her sights set on next season. She played most of this past campaign with a sore knee, but tests showed that there was no structural damage. While she plans on resting the knee, it will also be hard to keep her away from the course.

"I'm just going to keep working on it and try to round out my game completely and just get it all together at once and hopefully I make my goals and get lower," Eder said. "Next year I'm shooting to get low 70s repeatedly on 18 holes and see where it goes from there."

"MONTY PYTHON'S FLYING CIRCUS"

MCHS theater students take to the stage this weekend

"Monty Python's Flying Circus" is coming to North Madison Christian Church this weekend, as Madison High School theater students take to the stage.

Fifty years after the debut in October 1969, the students of Madison Theatre are carrying on the ridiculously odd, comedic sketches, songs and animations of the famed TV series.

Friday and Saturday evening at 7 p.m., and Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Madison Consolidated High School students, about 30 in all, will be carrying on with known acts such as, "Cheese Shop," "Argument Clinic," "Gumby Flower Arranging," "Lumberjack Song," "Dead Parrot," "Galaxy Song," and with many other popular shorts — all tied up in "a decidedly irreverent 'edukational' theme," according to Theatrical Rights Worldwide's website.

Adult tickets for the show are $10 online or $12 at the door; student tickets are $5 online and $7 at the door.

November 15-17, Madison Theatre will host another performance at North Madison Christian Church in preparations for the holiday season: Irving Berlin's "Holiday Inn."

For more information on the group, go to www.our.show/MadisonTheatre, or follow Madison Theatre on social media @Madison Theatre_IN.

Madison Consolidated High School senior and restaurant worker, Maddie Felts, holds out a dirty fork during a restaurant sketch, as patrons Erin Jolly (left) and Danny Winters (right), look on.

Skylar Marshall trudges down the long center aisle toward the stage, climbs up, his jacket torn to pieces, as he reaches out to the audience.

The show's line-up is as follows:

Director:
Aaron Kelsey
Assistant Director:
Melanie Torline
Lighting & Sound Crew:
Jaylah Abbot, Sean Mannix, Jonah Pearson and Skyler Young.

The Cast:

Jackson Bladen, Luka Chabukashvili, Ethan Cline, Lean Combs; Brooklyn Cornelius, Adrian Dean, Maddie Felts, Brianne Ford; Sam Hall, Tabetha Jameison, Eric Jolly, Vanina Kelsey, Ethan Mack; Skyler Marshall, Dillon Miller, Corleone Nicholson, Brooklyn Osterman; Davis Powell, Emily Skirvin, Connor Steveley, Natalie Stewart; Hannah Taylor, Emily Ward and Danny Winters.

Skyler Young watches the young actors from a distance, with the lighting and stage control boards before him.

Corleone Nicholson steps forward to introduce the next sketch during Madison Theatre's production of Monty Python's "Edukational Show," a collection of sketches, songs and animations from the famed TV series, "Monty Python's Flying Circus."

Homicidal barber Jackson Bladen struggles to trim-up patron Danny Winters's hair during the opening scenes of Madison Theatre's production of Monty Python's "Edukational Show."

Dillon Miller, Sam Hall and Skylar Marshall count their dollars during the show's "Money Song" sketch.

BRIDGE

DO NOT BE BLIND TO THE OPENING LEAD

A.N. Onymous said, "We must not allow the clock and the calendar to blind us to the fact that each moment of life is a miracle and mystery."

Each moment of life -- each trick -- at the bridge table can be a mystery. But careful analysis and counting will usually cause the light bulb to go on.

In an international match, neither declarer solved this mystery correctly. What should they have done in four hearts after West led the spade 10?

In the auction, South might have rebid three hearts because he had so many playing-tricks. But when he settled for two hearts, and North had sufficient to raise, South went for the game bonus.

The original declarers won with their spade ace, took dummy's top trumps and tried to cash the spade king, discarding their singleton diamond. However, West ruffed, and the defenders shortly took three club tricks for down one.

As I mentioned earlier this week, if the opening lead is in dummy's side suit and is not from an honor sequence, it is highly likely to be a singleton.

There was a much easier route to 10 tricks: one spade, seven hearts, one club and one club ruff on the board. South should immediately cash his club ace and concede a club. Suppose East takes that trick and returns his trump. South wins on the board, ruffs a spade, ruffs a club and claims.

Alternatively, if East leads back a spade, declarer must be careful to ruff high. Then he can take two club ruffs and collect an overtrick.

Satisfied with being "alone, but not lonely"

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I read your column in the local paper, and I've notice that folks always write in to say that they are older and alone or in a new town -- "How do I make friends," etc. So, I wonder if there are other people out there like my brother and me.

We are both in our mid- to late-50s. Our parents were quite the social couple. Dad was always the one who wore a lampshade on his head, the life of the party. However, my brother and I are the opposite. Don't get me wrong, we have childhood, lifelong friends and we are always there when things get going. But I, personally, have not made a "new" friend in probably 25 years, and I couldn't care less. My brother is the same way.

So many people are fakes, phonies, liars, etc., that neither of us have any interest in cultivating a new go-to person in our lives. I think it involves too much work and frankly, don't want to be bothered. I have a full-time job and commute 50 miles round-trip daily. When I come home, I want my time to myself.

I do attend church weekly and do love going out and shopping, but I prefer to do it alone. I always strike up conversations with strangers, but don't tell me your name; I'll forget it 5 seconds later. I am not intimidated by the general public and even ran for political office once. But I have zero interest in becoming friendly enough with people to want to socialize in any way with them, and my brother is the same way. We both are married, with children on their own. Are we odd, selfish, lazy or so laid back that we get ourselves and aren't into being impressed by anyone? I'm sure one day, when I am older, I will regret this, but for now, I... -- Love Being Lonely

Dear Love Being Lonely: You might enjoy being alone more than most, but you're not lonely. You have close family and friends and are content with your social life. You're doing fine, and I say if it ain't broke, don't fix it. A few deep personal connections are worth more than a hundred shallow ones. You don't have to be the lampshade-wearing type to lead a bright life.

Dear Annie: I've noticed a new customer service trend. When I'm checking out at the grocery store or doing banking, etc., the person behind the counter will ask me, "Are you doing anything fun today?" Or, "What are you doing this afternoon?"

Having been trained by my parents to be friendly and polite, I have actually told these complete strangers what are my plans.

Now I go running for the self-checkout aisle because I don't want to feel rude. I'd like to know if anyone else is as put out as I am about being asked personal questions. I mean, maybe I'm going to my child's funeral, or having chemotherapy, or not going somewhere at all because I'm struggling with depression.

I've chosen dead silence rather than a response. But I would be curious to know if others are experiencing this and how they feel about it. -- Put Out at the Checkout

Dear Put Out at the Checkout: For anyone enduring such hardships as the ones you cited, the go-to question, "How are you," could be equally upsetting or inane. I don't think we ought to give up on chit-chatting with one another altogether because of that. That said, should someone seem to not want to engage in small talk, we should try to pick up those cues and respect their space.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book -- featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette -- is available as a paperback and e-book.
